the Power of Pets

Far more than just a man's best friends, pets in our world today are making families complete and serving purposes more important that greeting their owners with wagging tails. Studies show that humans who own pets are often healthier, happier, and even live longer. At a very early age, children can learn the importance of responsibility, and life lessons such as discipline, patience, kindness and attentiveness from owning and caring for a pet. Offering protection, responsibility, health benefits and companionship, furry friends have become irreplaceable and their power invaluable.
